A workshop in autobiographical and creative short story, focusing on the complex connections between story-telling, interpretive skill, and the practice of medicine. Students will write and present autobiographical and and creative short stories about illness and medical care; the seminar will meet weekly to discuss these stories, attempting to identify and articulate the key issues each story expresses about what it means to be sick, what it might mean to take care of others in their illness. The writing and (especially) interpretive skills acquired in this workshop are directly valuable to anyone contemplating a career in medicine, but are equally valuable to anyone who might at some point encounter (in themselves or in someone they care for) the trauma of illness. In addition to the weekly workshop, participants will have one-on-one conferences with the instructor (himself an MD with an international reputation as a writer). A semester-long journal, focusing on the reverberations of the pandemic on the writer's daily (actual and interior) life, will form the basis for a final project, which may (at student option) be in the form of written narrative, an audio composition, or a film, composed using the tools available at the

TR, 3:30 pm - 6:00 pm. Instructor(s): James Ferguson / Samantha Buckner Terhune. Enrollment = 15.
¿Take a cooking class in college and get credit? Sign me up!¿ Thus often begins a 5 minute- to 2 hour conversation on Honors 330.001, When we first offered the class in 1997, it was a slightly naïve and timid enquiry into food and culture. Since 9/11/2001, the economic meltdown in 2008 and recovery since, and the Farm Bill, developing and sustaining a vital interest in the sourcing, preparation, consumption, sharing, and preservation of our daily bread has become an urgent concern for us. If one cannot eat sustainably there is no point in worrying about finance. Malthus will be proven correct. Then came COVID 19. The concerns it has fostered will nuance but not overshadow our course direction for spring 2023.

We will begin our trajectory by introducing scientific method and health affairs through the complex food studies prism by considering nutrition, eating disorders, epidemiology, genomics, and evolutionary biology. We examine such topics as the ethics of eating a diverse and sustainable diet, slow vs.

T, 6:00 pm - 7:00 pm. Instructor(s): Matthew Nielsen. Enrollment = 16.
This course is designed to supplement knowledge obtained through the traditional pre-medical curriculum in order to enhance students¿ development as health care providers. It has the following objectives:

1) Work in the health professions provides many different pathways for individuals to find meaning, purpose, and impact in the world. We will explore a variety of perspectives through a series of invited speakers from our community.
2) Broad and overlapping currents in the organization of medical care, payment for healthcare services, performance improvement, government regulation, and innovation have been shaping the environment within which care is delivered in this country for decades. These will continue to shape the environment for the decades to come. The seminar will provide students with an overview of changes in the delivery of medical care across several of these areas.

HNRS 390.001 | Love and Freedom: Spirituality and Social Change, a Global Perspective
R, 12:30 pm - 3:00 pm. Instructor(s): Michal Osterweil. Enrollment = 24.
This course seeks to explore the intersections of love and freedom understood socio-politically, and spiritually. The pursuit of freedom can be described as a socio-political endeavor, or a spiritual one. Rarely, however, do scholars look at the ways these two dimensions of liberation work intersect, overlap, contradict or lead to new political, spiritual and epistemological insights. This course explores this intersection in relation to a relatively contemporary set of movements that emerged during and in the aftermath of the Alterglobalization movement of the late 1990s and early 2000s and continue in different ways through to the present. The course will also delve into these questions through forms of self-study, reflective practices, and experiential learning modalities.

This course deals with the theme of the transition from ancient to modern understanding of the essence of politics and will concentrate on selected plays of Shakespeare that profoundly dramatize that transformation (Henry IV-Part I, Julius Caesar, King Lear, Macbeth and The Tempest). As the primary representatives of ancient thought, we shall read large portions of Aristotle¿s Nicomachean Ethics and Poetics. As the signal work in initiating modern thought, we shall read Machiavelli¿s Prince. This seminar will be conducted solely through conversation. Several essays, of varying length, will be required. There will also be an oral final examination. Students at all levels are welcome, and there are no prerequisites other than a willingness to read carefully and diligently.

Course Description: How do different cultures define, perceive, and treat mental illnesses? Some cultures view psychiatric illnesses as the presence of a spirit, while others solely believe it to be a chemical imbalance. The field of ethnopsychiatry serves to examine possible stigmatization, origins of mental illnesses, treatment methods, and the cultural dimensions of mental health. Once a branch of medical anthropology, this subject matter now draws from the fields of psychology, neuroscience, english, and public health. Understanding how various cultures conceptualize and respond to mental illnesses can elucidate how to best promote the mental health of the diverse populations within the United States.

Too often nowadays we adhere to an out of sight, out of mind mentality with waste. Our tendency to over consume is driven by the perfect storm of societal pressures and corporate marketing strategies, all under the umbrella of capitalism. As waste becomes an increasingly prevalent issue for our industries and environment, we must make the discourse of circularity and waste management a more common one.

LTAM 390 will examine one of the transcendental events of twentieth-century Latin America. Indeed: an event that had far-reaching global repercussions. Under the auspices of the revolution, Cubans embarked upon an ambitious project of change. Virtually all previously existing national institutions were abolished, modified, or otherwise reorganized in the service of a social justice project inscribed in the claim of national sovereignty and self-determination.

The course will focus on the origins and development of the Cuban revolution, spanning the years of the insurrectionary war of the 1950s through the present, with attention the context of social change, the policies and personalities of the revolution, the role played by Fidel Castro, change in gender and race relations, and the evolving character of socialism in Cuba¿all through multi-disciplinary perspectives as a way to arrive at a fuller understanding of the multiple and interacting facets of the revolution.

Experience and document North Carolina¿s Latin American and Caribbean history. This three-credit course combines field research, oral history, and service learning to understand the immigration and settlement of North Carolinians with Latin American and Caribbean ancestry. The course will address the ethical and practical aspects of the ethnographic method including the preparation, transaction and transcription of oral history interviews. Students will complete an independent research project using the New Roots Nuevas Ra¿ces initiative and spend spring break participating in oral history research and community-engaged learning in eastern North Carolina (March 12-17, 2023). An estimated 10% of course materials are in Spanish, so it is recommended that students have intermediate-advanced levels of Spanish language proficiency. (3 credit hours) This course examines how the functioning of marine organisms and ecosystems is impacted by water motion. Hydrodynamic forces as applied to locomotion and disturbance. Advective and diffusive transport as applied to nutrient supply and acquisition, larval transport, phytoplankton dynamics. The role of ocean circulation in establishing environmental conditions and distributions of organisms. Covers processes from the microscale to the ocean basin scale. Requires knowledge of basic calculus (MATH 231, 232) and mechanics (PHYS 114/118).

(3 credit hours) in-person for Morehead City (IMS)-based students and Zoom Chapel Hill-based students.
This course will take a deep dive into Project Drawdown (DRAWDOWN, The Most Comprehensive Plan Ever Proposed to Reverse Global Warming (2017, Paul Hawken (Ed.) Penguin Books Limited); https://drawdown.org), which seeks to educate and enlighten diverse stakeholders about human activities that are driving global warming and climate change. Importantly, Drawdown seeks to quantify and rank our activities contributing to global warming and offer truly impactful solutions for climate change mitigation, for example from direct atmospheric capture of CO2 to modifying food production practices to blue carbon sequestration. The class will explore the range of proposed climate change solutions, and the students will conduct a capstone-style project examining a topic of relevance to North Carolina in the Drawdown framework. The Capstone exercise will most likely have a coastal field trip day and a Chapel Hill campus day for all students to meeting in person.

FIRST-YEAR LAUNCH SECTION

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT HELP
Check the FAQ webpage for answers to frequently asked registration questions: https://ideasinaction.unc.edu/about/faq/ (see Registration and Credit section)

MATH 231H.01F | Calculus of Functions of One Variable I
MWF, 10:10 am - 11:00 am; Recitation: R, 3:30 pm - 4:20 pm. Instructor(s): Katie Newhall. Enrollment = 34.
Math 231 is designed to provide a detailed introduction to the fundamental ideas of calculus. It does not assume any prior calculus knowledge, but the student is expected to be proficient working with functions and their graphs as well as manipulating variable expressions and solving equations using algebra.
This is the Honors section of Math 231. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections as well as more involved applications. There will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections, and students will be expected to understand and reproduce proofs of theorems and formulas. In addition, this section will cover extra topics, including the epsilon-delta definition of limit. Applications will be more involved and will sometimes involve real data. Homework will be more challenging, with more emphasis on creative problem solving and less emphasis on drill. Students will be expected to complete a final project.

MATH 233H.001 | Calculus of Functions of Several Variables
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm; Recitation: W, 2:30 pm - 3:20 pm. Instructor(s): Andrey Smirnov. Enrollment = 34.
Level: This is the Honors section of MATH 233. It offers a more demanding and deeper treatment than the regular sections. For example, there will be more emphasis on understanding theory than in other sections. Topics: Vectors in three dimensional space. Dot products and cross products and their applications. Functions of two and three variables. Polar and spherical coordinates. Graphs and contours. Multivariable calculus: partial derivatives, gradient. Curves in space. Surfaces: normal vector, tangent plane. Maxima and minima. Lagrange multipliers. Double and triple definite integrals, line integrals, Green's theorem.

PREREQUISITE: AT LEAST A B+ IN MATH 232 AT UNC OR A 5 ON THE BC CALCULUS EXAM.

MATH 383H.001 | First Course Differential Equations
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Mark Williams. Enrollment = 35.
The main topic of this course is ordinary differential equations (ODEs), and we will study a number of techniques for solving these. However, we will for the most part avoid an ad hoc approach, where students are taught one solution technique after another. Rather, our emphasis will be on developing systematic methods for understanding ODEs. We will also study some (mostly physical) applications.

The honors section will place greater emphasis than other sections on understanding the underlying theory of ODEs. For example, we will give a careful proof of the fundamental existence and uniqueness theorem for ODEs. In order to do this we will have to develop some tools from analysis. This will consist mainly in deepening the students¿ understanding of concepts like convergence of sequences that are already familiar from calculus courses.

Linear algebra is an essential tool for the systematic study of ODEs, especially linear ODEs. The honors section will devote more time than most sections to a study of the basic concepts of linear algebra: vector spaces, linear transformations, linear independence, basis, dimension, eigenvalues, Prerequisites: Math 233 and Math 383.

This is a topics course that will aim at introducing the theory of dynamical systems. Topics will cover the central topological and probabilistic notions in dynamics ranging from Newtonian mechanics to coding theory. No knowledge of manifolds or measure theory is necessary.
The concepts and tools for describing asymptotic behavior in dynamical systems will be presented through a progression of examples. Selected chapters from B. Hasselblatt and A. Katok `s book will be covered. Problems and exercises will be often selected from M. Brin and G. Stuck textbook. Supplemental topics will be explored at the discretion of the instructor.

This course does NOT require permission of the instructor only the prerequisites listed above. Please disregard the description stating that instructor permission is required.

Stability of Nonlinear States in Evolution Equations

We cover existence theory for nonlinear states in a variety of nonlinear evolution equations: 1. Dispersive models such as Korteweg-de Vries; nonlinear Schrödinger or Gross-Pitaevski, Dirac and Klein-Gordon equations, as well as other models like Density Functional Theory in quantum mechanics, Dispersion Managed models from optics, Wave and Schrödinger Maps, Schrödinger-Coulomb models, models from weak turbulence, etc.; and 2. Parabolic models such as Ginzburg-Landau equations, thin-films, and models from material science. While these may seem disparate and unrelated, we will see that in many cases finding stationary states for such models follows from similar tools. We will consider the existence of nonlinear states from the point of view of ode theory, the calculus of variations, and by using bifurcation theory in function spaces applied to a number of examples. We will also introduce some numerical schemes for locating these states and discuss their convergence properties. Then, we will discuss aspects of spectral stability and address this question in a variety of examples. Since the linearized operators around these states are non-self-adjoint, the analysis of these operators can be rather

This is a required course for first-year MTSC graduate students. Students gain knowledge and learn key skillsets outside of their technical course work needed for success in their PhD program and beyond. MTSC711 follows on the topics learned in MTSC710 to broaden the professional development of materials science PhD students. Students work to develop an Individual Development Plan, to understand the variety of career paths available for PhD-holders, and to practice research presentations.
Grading status: H/P/L/F.

Class will meet in Murray Hall, room 1127.

The Seminar in Materials Science and Engineering is a required 1-credit course for all Materials Science students in fall and spring semesters of years 2-5 of their doctoral program. The course tracks attendance at the required APS departmental seminars. Attending departmental seminars is an important component of training for MTSC doctoral students. Engaging in the seminars will help students gain a working knowledge of a variety of research areas important to their doctoral research and to their future career.

The course introduces the electronic and optical processes in organic molecules and polymers that govern the behavior of practical organic optoelectronic devices. The course begins with an overview of fundamental science of electronic materials and devices. We then discuss their optoelectronic properties of organic molecules, including topics from photophysics, charge transport and injection. Emphasis will be equally placed on the use of both inorganic and organic electronic materials in organic electronic devices.
Prerequisites: No prerequisites

TITLE: Music and Women's Rights
IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FC-POWER, RESEARCH

DESCRIPTION
This seminar is about the history and protest songs of the First and Second Waves of American feminism, from the Seneca Falls Convention in 1848 ¿ where women declared their equality with men and called for women¿s right to vote ¿ to the passage of Roe v. Wade and the Equal Rights Amendment in the 1970s. Issues for discussion include the intersectionality of women¿s rights and civil rights movements. Professor MacNeil grew up in the women¿s rights movement of the 1960s and 70s, marching in Take Back the Night rallies and singing the songs of the women¿s movement. Her hometown of Ithaca, NY is about 40 miles from Seneca Falls, where the first Convention on Women¿s Rights was held July 19 and 20, 1848. Her grandmother was a member of the Wyoming County Women¿s Christian Temperance Union (WCTU), her mother was a Link Trainer operator during World War II, and her godmother authored the first women¿s reproductive

This course explores the musical lives of incarcerated people in the United States, particularly since the early 20th century. At heart, the course examines how people claim and reclaim their humanity through music in a system that is fundamentally dehumanizing. Among the questions that will guide discussion include the following: What roles does music play in the lives of incarcerated people? How have incarcerated musicians and their music been represented in scholarship and by the media? What ethical challenges and considerations face scholars and musicians who engage with incarcerated people? In the latter part of the semester, students will engage with incarcerated musicians in North Carolina

An exploration of UNC Chapel Hill's wonderful historical keyboard instrument collection through the study of music written for these very instruments between 1820 and 1900. Investigation of the historical and cultural context of music written during this era, as well as performance practice issues surrounding these instruments. Musical examples will include selected keyboard, vocal, and chamber works of Beethoven, Schubert, Chopin, Schumann, and others. The class will prepare, curate and present a concert of music on UNC's 1843 Pleyel at the end of the semester. No prior musical experience required. For keyboard players, string players, singers, and wind players, the class may involve a performance component.

This course ranges across time, culture, genre, and media to investigate the impact of technology on the musical life of the world. The following questions will guide discussion: What is the nature of the relationship between musical agents (listeners, performers, composers, etc.) and technology? What cultural priorities and value systems are revealed in the way musical agents interact with technology? How have new forms of making and experiencing music arisen out of this interaction and how have existing musical practices changed? The course includes conversations with guest musicians, scholars, and technologists. This course has prerequisite requirements.

The principle of »l¿art pour l¿art« (art for art¿s sake) has dominated much of the way we hear and appreciate music. Since its emancipation from the church and courts, western music has been portrayed largely as a neutral aesthetic realm that is immune to the influence of political reality. In this seminar we will question that assumption, listen to music together, discuss pertinent literature, and explore connections between musical composition and society. We will see that political history is not only for the beholding but for listening. Listening to music is to receive a message. If we learn the musical code, we may be able to understand composition as a blueprint of society, even as a herald for social change, thus providing fresh insight into how the transformation of political landscapes are mirrored in sound.

No prior musical knowledge or abilities are required, but you should enjoy listening to music, be open to learning some basic terminology, and be prepared to stretch your ears.
NOTE: Honors Carolina students can register themselves for SPRING 2023 online when their registration appointment begins.
Non-Honors students will be eligible to enroll beginning November 18 during open enrollment.

PHIL 150H.001 | Theory, Evidence, and Understanding in Science
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Marc Lange. Enrollment = 24.
The discoveries that scientists make and the methods by which they make them raise a host of interesting philosophical questions, some of which we will explore in this course. These questions include: Are scientific theories distinguished from pseudoscience by being testable against our observations? If so, precisely how is this distinction to be drawn? By what logic do our observations support or disconfirm various scientific theories? Can we prove our best scientific theories to be true? Or are they ¿merely theories¿? (Or is this a false choice?) Are we justified in making predictions about the future on the basis of observations drawn exclusively from the past? If so, why? What does it mean for one event (for instance, the collision of the Earth with some large rocky body millions of years ago) to be responsible for causing the occurrence of another event (such as the extinction of the dinosaurs) and for explaining why it occurred? What makes a given regular pattern that we might notice (such as the fact that every piece of copper is electrically conductive) not just a giant coincidence, but a law of nature? Do the wholesale revolutions in scientific thought that have occasionally occurred (such as the Copernican

PHIL 160H.001 | Introduction to Ethics
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Roaslind Chaplin. Enrollment = 24.
In this introduction to ethical theory, we will discuss classical and contemporary texts on the most fundamental topics in ethics: We will cover the nature of the good life, the criteria for right action, and the relation between religion and morality. We will also address skeptical challenges to morality and the question why one should be moral at all. Prominent sources from the history of ethics will include Aristotle (virtue ethics), Hobbes (contractarianism), Kant (deontology), and Mill (utilitarianism).

PHIL 163H.001 | Practical Ethics: Moral Reasoning and How We Live
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Tom Dougherty. Enrollment = 23.
This course draws on contemporary moral philosophy to shed light on some of the most pressing ethical questions of our time. We will look at arguments that help us answer practical questions like: Can sexual desires be politically criticized? Should abortion be allowed? Is it ok to eat meat? Are college athletics exploitative? Are we obligated to make donations to relieve people from poverty? Is military conscription the most fair way of organizing the armed forces? By the end of the course, you should have a good understanding of these practical ethical issues, and, more crucially, be equipped with the conceptual resources to think through new ethical questions and dilemmas as they arise in personal and professional life.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

PLCY 061H.001 | Policy Entrepreneurship and Public/Private/Non-Profit Partnerships
MW, 1:25 pm - 2:40 pm. Instructor(s): Daniel Gitterman. Enrollment = 24.
This seminar will define a policy entrepreneur and examine strategies used by policy entrepreneurs to achieve policy change or innovation in the policy making process. This course also aims to explore ways that public, private, and non-profit sectors collaborate to address problems that cannot be solved by one sector alone. There is growing recognition that sustainable solutions to some of the most complex challenges confronting our communities can benefit from these collaborative or ¿intersector¿ approaches.

FIRST YEAR STUDENTS ONLY.

Daniel Gitterman is Duncan MacRae ¿09 and Rebecca Kyle MacRae Professor and Chair of Public Policy at UNC-Chapel Hill. He also serves as Director of the

PLCY 340H.001 | Justice in Public Policy
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Benjamin Meier. Enrollment = 24.
To paraphrase the American political philosopher John Rawls, justice is the first virtue of public policy. No matter how efficient or well arranged, laws and institutions must be abolished if they are unjust. Accordingly, some of the most basic questions of public policy are questions of justice: what goals should the government aim to realize? What means may it adopt to realize those goals? In this course, we examine the most prominent theoretical approaches to these questions: utilitarianism, contractualism, and rights-based views. We shall aim to determine whether governments should maximize individual welfare, or whether the proper role of government is to respect and protect the rights of its citizens. We shall also employ these theoretical frameworks to think through pressing contemporary policy problems, which may include economic justice and the design of welfare policy, the ethics of climate change, justice in immigration, the moral limits of markets, the role of religion in politics, and the ethics of whistle-blowing.

Thinking About Law Description
Are you interested in being a lawyer or public official? Do you know what it means to ¿think like a lawyer?¿ Have you considered why people mostly honor the law? Where do you find ¿the law?¿ How do judges decide difficult cases? This seminar will explore the notion of a rule of law, formal and customary law, legal analysis, judicial interpretation and the realities of the adversarial system and law practice. We will consider what makes law seem legitimate and how to assess whether it promotes liberty and justice. This seminar will challenge students to be reflective and critical about their own perspectives and to explore personal responsibility for promoting a rule of law. Students will be engaged in analytical thinking and expression through required participation in teacher-led dialogues based on assigned readings and with research and writing assignments. Reading materials include selections from court cases and other sources that provide an introduction to the notion of a rule of law, the sources of law that govern us and protect our individual rights, the nature of legal analysis, the different methods of judicial interpretation, and the realities of law practice and the adversarial system.

POLI 150H.001 | International Relations and World Politics
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Mark Crescenzi. Enrollment = 22.
This course introduces you to world politics from an analytical, social scientific perspective. The goal is to understand why and how political actors in the international arena make decisions that affect us all. Why do nations fight? Why do they cooperate, both economically and politically? Why do we have such a hard time solving the puzzle of global warming, or poverty? How can we understand the mechanisms that encourage cooperation over conflict in world politics? This course goes beyond learning how others have studied problems in world politics. Our goal is to demonstrate how theories of world politics can be constructed and applied, and, in turn, to have you engage in this process of application using cases drawn from recent and current events.

POLI 252H.001 | International Organizations and Global Issues
TR, 9:30 am - 10: 45 am. Instructor(s): Robert Jenkins. Enrollment = 21.
Why do states create and join international organizations? How can international organizations (IOs) affect state behavior? What role do IOs play in solving global problems? The goal of this course is to help students develop an understanding of international organizations and the global problems that they attempt to address. We will explore the institutional makeup, political processes, and impact of international organizations on global politics. The course both provides a general overview of the role of IOs in global politics and a specific focus on the European Union (EU) as a unique effort by states to pool sovereignty. The thread that ties the diverse themes together is the issue of state sovereignty and how international organizations and global issues such as human rights, sustainable development, and climate change illustrate different actors in global politics

POLI 255H.001 | International Migration & Citizenship
W, 2:30 pm - 5:00 pm. Instructor(s): Niklaus Steiner. Enrollment = 24.
While the global movement of products, services, ideas, and information is increasingly free, the movement of people across borders remains tightly controlled by governments. This control over international migration is a highly contested issue, and it is complicated by the fact that never before have so many people had the ability to move from one country to another while at the same time governments have never had so much power to control this movement.

This class explores the moral, economic, political, and cultural dimensions of this movement across international borders. The class is based on discussions (as opposed to lectures) and tackles thorny questions like: do we have an obligation to let poor people into our rich country? what constitutes persecution? how do foreigners affect national identity? how should citizenship be allocated? We will pay particular attention to the distinction between migrants who move voluntarily (immigrants) and those who are forced to flee (refugees) - is this an important distinction to make, and does one group deserve admission more than the other? No prior knowledge or experience is needed; instead, students need to be ready to dig deep into all sides of migration issues through

POLI 270H.001 | Classical Political Thought
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Susan Bickford. Enrollment = 24.
What is Classical Political Thought?

Classical: In this context, classical means ancient and medieval. When political theorists talk about the classical period, they are generally referring to ancient Hebrew, Greek, and Roman political thought and medieval European and Middle Eastern political thought. There are also other traditions of classical thought (for example, Confucius would be taught in a course on classical Chinese thought). In this class, we will focus on ancient Greek and medieval European political thought.

Political: For ancient and medieval writers, thinking about politics was intertwined with thinking about ethics, psychology, knowledge, and religion. So the

POLI 490.001 - Advanced Public Opinion

Consent of the governed is important to representative democracy, making public opinion a key topic. In this class, we will examine a range of characteristics and beliefs that the public ought to possess for democracy to operate effectively. We will use both course readings and students¿ own analysis of survey data to see how well the public measures up. During the course of the term, we will place particular emphasis on polarization and the degree to which it undermines the public's ability to play its proscribed role.

POLI 400-level courses are reserved for POLI majors during Wave 1 of Registration (until Nov 4). Available seats will be released to both Poli majors and non-majors at the beginning of Wave 2 (Nov 7).

POLI 490.002 - Urban Politics in the United States

This course provides an introduction to the politics of American cities. Topics covered include the economics and history of urban agglomerations, local governments' place in the American federal system, the role of race and immigration in how parties and coalitions govern, whether local governments are responsive to voters, and the role cities play in shaping housing, education, climate, and criminal justice policy.

To be taught by Alexander Sahn.

NSCI 222H.001 | Learning
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Todd Thiele. Enrollment = 24.
This course is designed to introduce the student to the topic of animal learning and behavior. We will consider Pavlovian or ¿Classical¿ learning, operant learning, and the role of learning in drug abuse and dependence. Students will acquire knowledge of the procedures used to study learning, the ways that learned behaviors are expressed, and theories that have been proposed to explain how learning is represented in memory. Because neuroscience has had such a tremendous impact on our understanding of learning, memory, and behavior, we will also consider new findings from neuroscience that have allowed an understanding of the underlying brain substrates.

PREREQUISITE: NSCI 175 or PSYC 101.

Topics in vision, audition, and the lower senses. Receptor mechanisms, psychophysical methods, and selected perceptual phenomena will be discussed.

PREREQUISITE: PSYC 101.

I am a cognitive scientist who takes an interdisciplinary approach to studying how people take in and use information from the world. A major focus of my work is the interface between perception and language comprehension, a topic that I have pursued by examining the role of higher-level auditory processing in the recognition of spoken language and the manner in which visual and oculomotor factors shape reading comprehension.

NSCI 490: Glial Neuroscience (3)
Instructor: Dr. Kate Reissner (001)
Prerequisites: NSCI 175 or PSYC 101 and 220
This upper-level NSCI seminar will provide an in-depth examination of structure and function of glia, and will explore the fundamental roles that glia play in the healthy and diseased brain. The course will utilize a blend of didactic instruction with active learning, and emphasis on critical analysis and discussion of primary literature. Focus will be placed on research methods as well as findings and results. Guest speakers responsible for fundamental studies will visit class remotely to provide historical context and first hand accounts of the papers we study.

Title: Animal Behavior (3)
Instructor: Dr. Sylvia Fitting
Prerequisites: NSCI 175, or PSYC 101 and PSYC 220
Description: The primary function of this course is to survey the wide variety of experimental methods used in animal studies to assess various behavioral outcomes, including learning and memory, attention, anxiety, depression, and drug seeking. This then will be combined with readings on how changes in brain circuitry can affect behavioral outcomes, such as drugs of abuse or other disease states.

PSYC 058H.001 | The Psychology of Mental States and Language Use
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Jennifer Arnold. Enrollment = 24.
As adults we constantly make judgments about other people¿s beliefs, desires, goals, knowledge, and intentions from evidence like eye gaze and inferences from their words and actions. These judgments together can be called mindreading, or theory of mind (where ¿theory¿ refers to the theory someone might hold about another¿s mental state, not a scientific theory). This information is known to guide some aspects of language use -- for example, you wouldn¿t ask someone to hand you ¿that book¿ if they don¿t know it exists. But sometimes you might ignore what someone else does or does not know ¿ for instance asking someone for ¿the red book¿ when that person is sitting in front of two red books. This course examines how children, adults, and individuals with autism infer other people¿s mental states, and how they use it to guide decisions during speaking and understanding. This seminar will follow a discussion format.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

PWAD 150H.001 | International Relations and World Politics
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Mark Crescenzi. Enrollment = 2.
This course introduces you to world politics from an analytical, social scientific perspective. The goal is to understand why and how political actors in the international arena make decisions that affect us all. Why do nations fight? Why do they cooperate, both economically and politically? Why do we have such a hard time solving the puzzle of global warming, or poverty? How can we understand the mechanisms that encourage cooperation over conflict in world politics? This course goes beyond learning how others have studied problems in world politics. Our goal is to demonstrate how theories of world politics can be constructed and applied, and, in turn, to have you engage in this process of application using cases drawn from recent and current events.

POLI 252H.001 | International Organizations and Global Issues
TR, 9:30 am - 10: 45 am. Instructor(s): Robert Jenkins. Enrollment = 21.
Why do states create and join international organizations? How can international organizations (IOs) affect state behavior? What role do IOs play in solving global problems? The goal of this course is to help students develop an understanding of international organizations and the global problems that they attempt to address. We will explore the institutional makeup, political processes, and impact of international organizations on global politics. The course both provides a general overview of the role of IOs in global politics and a specific focus on the European Union (EU) as a unique effort by states to pool sovereignty. The thread that ties the diverse themes together is the issue of state sovereignty and how international organizations and global issues such as human rights, sustainable development, and climate change illustrate different actors in global politics

PWAD 489H.001 | Empire and Diplomacy
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Ted Leinbaugh. Enrollment = 10.
This course surveys foundational texts of Western literature and focuses on the theme of imperium. The course attempts to define the concept of imperium in epic literature (see, for example, Philip Hardie, Virgil's Aeneid: Cosmos and Imperium and David Quint, Epic and Empire) by exploring themes and topics broadly related to power and empire, including war and peace, imperialism, heroism, colonialism, irredentism, nationalism, and the negotiation of power through rhetoric and diplomacy. The course seeks to understand how ancient texts impact, shape, and define our world today.
Distinguished scholars will join us during the semester to help introduce and explain texts that may be unfamiliar, and internationally recognized diplomats and global leaders will share their thoughts on the play of power on the world stage today. No course prerequisites are needed to enroll.

PWAD 490.043 - The US in Asia 1783 to Present
This is a course about American policies and actions in Asia from the beginning of the country through the present. In order to help students understand the American role, the course will cover major developments in Asia itself during the period. The first third of the course will cover the period from roughly 1800 through the Second World War, ending in 1945. The middle third of the course will cover the Cold War period from 1945 through about 2000, and the final third will cover the past 20 years.
The basic text for the course will By More Than Providence: Grand Strategy and American Power in the Asia-Pacific Since 1783, by Michael J. Greene.
Students will write two papers during the course, make one class presentation, and will have the choice of writing a final paper on taking an exam.

PWAD 490.043 is reserved for PWAD majors during Wave 1 and Wave II of Registration (until Nov 17). Available seats will be released to both PWAD majors

COURSE TITLE: Confronting Antisemitism

CAROLINA AWAY PROGRAM
JWST 390-001 is connected with the Carolina Away program.

COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course takes a broad look at antisemitism in history, our contemporary world, and at UNC. Class sessions will feature guest speakers and discussions on different aspects of this persistent form of hatred. The class offers a unique opportunity to explore the humanities and social sciences, meeting with faculty from English, History, Religious Studies, Psychology, German Studies and other fields. Students will hear firsthand testimony about individual experiences with antisemitism in Europe and the American South. Learning about the interconnections among Antisemitism and other forms of intolerance,

RELI 185H.001 | Women/Gender/Islam
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm. Instructor(s): Juliane Hammer. Enrollment = 24.
This course explores norms, discourses and practices related to gender and sexuality in Muslim societies and communities in their historical dimensions and contemporary expressions. We focus on the link between religion and gender through exploration and analysis of foundational religious texts, legal interpretations, and religious practices in diverse Muslim contexts and consider the definitions of and challenges to gender and sexual norms. The course emphasizes the interplay of historical developments and contemporary expressions and foregrounds the agency of Muslim women in assessing, challenging, changing and/or preserving their roles in Muslim societies. It relates the study of women and gender in Islam to the larger fields of women in religion(s) and women and gender studies.

Dr. Juliane Hammer is a professor in the Department of Religious Studies at UNC. Hammer previously taught at Elon University, the University of North

RELI 217H.001 | Gnosticism
TR, 11:00 am - 12:15 pm . Instructor(s): Zlatko Pleše. Enrollment = 24.
This multidisciplinary course offers a comprehensive survey of ancient Christian `Gnosticism¿, one of the earliest and most long-lived branches of early Christianity, notorious for its promise of personal salvation through a firsthand knowledge (gnosis) of the divine. Principal readings are drawn from the famous ¿Nag Hammadi Library,¿ a manuscript hoard buried at the time of official suppression of `heretical¿ sects around 350 CE and discovered in 1945 by two Egyptian locals. In this course, students are expected to develop expertise, in textual analysis and broad interpretation, of ancient Gnostic myth and to acquaint themselves with various denominations within Gnostic Christianity, their doctrines, and their ritual practices. We will situate the ancient Gnostics in a complex network of early Christian groups and their conflicting ideas about orthodoxy, authority, and canon, as well as identify religious, philosophical, and literary traditions that helped to inform the basic tenets of ancient Gnosis. The course concludes by focusing on modern uses and misuses of the term `gnosticism¿¿a broad category including the poetry of William Blake, the fiction of Kafka and Melville, psychoanalysis, the New Age movement,

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT HELP

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

TITLE: Déjà vu: Medicine and Narration across Time and Space

DESCRIPTION
Hallucinations, depression, hysteria, paranoia, anxiety, neurosis, body dysmorphic disorder, obsession, and pain are only some of the symptoms that will be reflected in the narratives of this course. The authors featured in this seminar are familiar with the medical knowledge of their time and are often patients themselves suffering from the medical conditions they describe. Throughout the semester, we will examine the practices of authors ¿ such as Maupassant, Montaigne, Selzer, Sembène, or Meruane ¿ who not only borrow heavily from medicine in composing their works but also conceive of writing itself as something medical, that is, as having a therapeutic function for both writer and reader. Accordingly, we will study a group of writers and artists across time and space who explore, adapt, and converse with contemporaneous medical learning in their creative works.

SPAN 301H.001 | Introduction to Literary and Cultural Analysis
MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Cristina Carrasco. Enrollment = 11.
This course is designed for students in the Honors Program, who have been recommended by their SPAN 261 instructor, or who have received the approval of the SPAN 301 course coordinator. The course prepares students to analyze texts in at least three different genres (theater, poetry, essay, narrative, or film), within a cultural context. In this process, students will improve their language proficiency in Spanish as they are exposed to different world views through the study of literature and culture. SPAN 301H differs from SPAN 301 in several ways; writing assignments are more challenging in terms of length and research expectations, and students use a Spanish conversation digital platform to further practice their Spanish skills speaking with native speakers. In addition, students also work on a creative, non-traditional, final project (a musical composition, an original short story, a graphic text, or any other cultural project based on their academic interests and inspired by our readings and discussions). The course also integrates cultural events outside of the classroom such as movies, guest lectures, art exhibits, or performances as part of class participation.

SPAN 301H.002 | Introduction to Literary and Cultural Analysis
MWF, 11:15 am - 12:05 pm. Instructor(s): Cristina Carrasco. Enrollment = 9.
Dr. Cristina Carrasco is a native of Valencia, Spain, and has an M.A in Comparative Literature from the University of Iowa and a PhD. in Hispanic Literature from the University of Texas at Austin. Her research focuses on contemporary Spanish and Transatlantic studies. Building on her doctoral work on the autobiographical metafictions of Miguel de Unamuno, Rosa Montero, Enrique Vila-Matas, and Juan José Millás, she examines the ways in which contemporary hybrid genres continue to reconfigure Spanish and Latin American literature in an age of globalization and new cultural mestizajes. She is also interested in Transatlantic cinema and literature, particularly in texts that address recent immigration to Spain, exotic representations of marginalized groups, and transnational identities in the Iberian Peninsula. Her current research project explores Spanish and neocolonial representations of Latin America in contemporary Spanish women¿s narratives.

MNGT 120H.001 | Introduction to Interpersonal and Organizational Communication
TR, 12:30 pm - 1:45 pm. Instructor(s): Katie Striley. Enrollment = 7.
Interpersonal communication is about our connections with other human beings. Communication shapes our understandings of ourselves, others, organizations, and social systems. Our communication creates and recreates the social worlds in which we reside. We often take interpersonal communication for granted, assuming that we already know much of it because we engage it on a daily basis. Yet, through engaged study, we will come to realize that interpersonal communication is complicated, consequential, and crucial. This course provides a space to openly analyze and discuss the role interpersonal and organizational communication plays in our understanding of self, other, and everyday life as constituted through the relationships that we create, sustain, and sometimes end.

SOCI 057H.001 | Rationalization and the Changing Nature of Social Life in 21st-Century America
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Howard Aldrich. Enrollment = 24.
Today, fast food restaurants have become a model for everyday life. Some scholars have even talked about the "McDonaldization" of the nation and the world. By that, scholars mean a drive toward greater efficiency, predictability, calculability, and control by non-human technologies in modern organizations. This drive has shaped many features of American life, including health care, law, and education. Such forces have even affected personal relationships. Sociologists have a term for this process: "rationalization." We will explore ¿rationalization¿ through a process called "active learning" in which you will have opportunities to explore online resources, engage in peer-to-peer discussions, and work with me to develop a research project in which you explore the impact of rationalization on an occupation that might be a destination for you. We will spend one class period, every other week, working on the term paper in class. We will have four or five guests, sharing their expertise on how rationalization has affected their work. You will be assessed based on your contributions to blog posts, class discussion, short answer written assignments, and a research project culminating in a term paper (15-20 pages). You will

TITLE: Discrimination in the Labor Market
IDEAS IN ACTION GEN EDS: FC-POWER

DESCRIPTION
There are many forms of inequality in the U.S. labor market and in workplaces, including, for example, inequality across gender, race/ethnicity, social class, immigration status, sexual orientation, and parental status; and across dimensions and outcomes including pay, hiring opportunities, job authority, performance evaluations, and promotion decisions. This first-year seminar provides a deep dive into labor market inequality and specifically focuses on the causes, consequences, and opportunities to change inequalities arising from discrimination. We will consider questions such as: What are the causes of inequality and discrimination? How have causes and patterns of inequality changed in recent history? How do legal, academic, and other institutions understand discrimination, and how do these understandings differ from the lived experiences of people who may face discrimination? What forms of Optimization for Machine Learning and Neural Networks. This course focuses on optimization aspects of common problems and topics in machine learning, statistical learning, and neural networks. It covers several topics such as optimization of linear regression, nonlinear regression, matrix factorization, stochastic gradient descent, regularization techniques, neural networks, and deep learning techniques.

Prerequisites:
--- Linear algebra and multivariable calculus, or equivalent
--- Programming language: Basic Python
--- Students who do not have such backgrounds, contact the instructor for permission.

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

ENROLLMENT HELP

WGST 111H.001 | Introduction to Sexuality Studies
TR, 2:00 pm - 3:15 pm. Instructor(s): Karen Booth. Enrollment = 15.
This course introduces students to concepts, research, and implications for policy and activism emerging from the interdisciplinary field of sexuality studies. We will discuss the history of the field and become acquainted with a variety of perspectives particularly from feminist and queer studies, anthropology, sociology, and history. Focusing on the United States, we will consider what it means to analyze sexuality and gender as social constructs; the overlaps and distinctions among ¿gender,¿ ¿sex,¿ and ¿sexuality;¿ how systems of inequality, such as white supremacy, capitalism, patriarchy, heterosexism, and able-ism intersect to construct ¿sexuality;¿ the emergence of ¿lesbian,¿ ¿bi,¿ ¿transgender,¿ ¿gay,¿ ¿queer,¿ and other identities and social movements; reproductive politics; marriage; and debates over and experiences of sex education.
The course takes an explicitly feminist perspective. I do not pretend to be ¿unbiased¿ nor do I pretend to present ¿all¿ sides of an issue. I do, however, try to create an atmosphere in which you can express multiple and perhaps conflicting views while engaging with the concepts and empirical findings of U.S.

WGST 240H.001 | Women in Greek Art and Literature
TR, 3:30 pm - 4:45 pm. Instructor(s): Sharon James. Enrollment = 10.
In this class, we will learn about the life of women in ancient Greece, beginning with this question: what do we mean when we say ¿women in ancient Greece¿? Since Greek cultural values and class structures make the category ¿woman¿ very complex, it will take us all semester to answer this question. We will focus on the treatment, both legal and social, of women in antiquity, by examining the visual depictions of women and women¿s lives as well as the literary evidence. We will also look at the gap between ideology and reality, asking "did Greek men really hate women?" We will cover about 900 years of history in this course.

Throughout the term we will study theories, laws, and social practices applying to women, looking particularly at: concepts of woman; differing gender ideologies for women in the different regions of Greece (Sparta, Gortyn, Athens) and in different social classes; occupations for women; the involvement of

Non- SILS students are not allowed to register for all other INLS courses as they are restricted to INLS major, minors and graduate students during early registration. NON-SILS students will need to add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina for the course you are interested in, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become available.
*Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time and 17 hours is the max during early registration.
We will begin to fill available seats from the waitlist in mid-December. If you are not waitlisted, you will not be allowed to enroll.

Attributes: IDEA - FY - First Year Seminar

WHO CAN ENROLL IN THIS CLASS?
Only first-year students (and transfer students who transferred <24 post-high school college course credits) can enroll in this class. Students may only enroll in one (1) First-Year Seminar or one (1) First-Year Launch during their time at UNC. If you are a transfer student, please refer to the UNC Catalog (https://catalog.unc.edu/undergraduate/ideas-in-action/#transferstudentstext) for additional information. Honors first-year students should not enroll in this class; they should only enroll in an Honors First-Year Seminar or Honors First-Year Launch.

Non-SILS students are allowed to register for INLS 151, 201 and 161. However, seats are prioritized according to year (freshman, sophomore, and junior). If you receive a `reserve capacity not met¿ error message for an open course (green dot), it means that all seats reserved for your year are currently filled. You must add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become available. Seniors are not allowed to enroll in these 3 courses.
*Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time and 17 hours is the max during early registration.
We will begin to fill available seats from the waitlist in mid-December. If you are not waitlisted, you will not be allowed to enroll.

Non- SILS students are not allowed to register for all other INLS courses as they are restricted to INLS major, minors and graduate students during early registration. NON-SILS students will need to add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina for the course you are interested in, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become available.
*Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time and 17 hours is the max during early registration.
We will begin to fill available seats from the waitlist in mid-December. If you are not waitlisted, you will not be allowed to enroll.

Non- SILS students are not allowed to register for all other INLS courses as they are restricted to INLS major, minors and graduate students during early registration. NON-SILS students will need to add yourself to the waitlist in Connect Carolina for the course you are interested in, as we will not be keeping an internal waitlist. We will enroll from the waitlist as seats become available.
*Undergraduates can only be on one waitlist at a time and 17 hours is the max during early registration.
We will begin to fill available seats from the waitlist in mid-December. If you are not waitlisted, you will not be allowed to enroll.

MEJO 447H.001 | Media in the UK: London
TR, 9:30 am - 10: 45 am. Instructor(s): Lucinda Austin. Enrollment = 18.
Today¿s communication and media professionals are called upon to work with diverse markets, audiences, publics, and stakeholders from around the world. To help prepare you for a career in the dynamic international world of communication, this class will introduce you to the British media market, including a spring break trip to London. Prior to the London trip, you will learn about the history of media and communication industries in the United Kingdom, exploring both similarities and differences with those in the United States. You will consider how media industries interact with political, economic and cultural forces. You will travel to London to engage with and learn from communication and media professionals in news and strategic communication companies. You will also interact with students and faculty at City University London in an effort to expand your global perspectives about the complexities of communication messages and strategies. During the course, you will focus on your chosen area of specialization (journalism, public relations, advertising, graphic design, etc.), but you will also be fully engaged with students who are specializing in other areas.
